

Field profile close to the cathodes. Due to cathodes and anodes together

Vertical axis provide the height of the sub-section Horizontal axis provide the width of the sub-section

The presence of an electric field moving to the anodes at the edge between concrete and ground (Electric field profile above) prove that the anodes, cathodes distribution and the current injected in the system are providing the energy necessary to have the EOP system working properly.